

Seven-Day Quarantine at Home Begins Today

June 13, 2021

Today, I have returned home from Zhongshan. I really appreciate the amount of time and effort that the staffers at the quarantine hotel invested in me in the past fourteen days. However, my quarantine does not end here.

Following the government's disease control rules, I must quarantine at home for another seven days after concluding the fourteen-day concentration quarantine. China has been taking COVID seriously since day one. This is certainly not a "flu" per some politicians in the West. This pandemic requires continuous caution and government-led effort to put it under control.

In the next seven days, I will continue to study for my driver license test and apply to more jobs so that I can secure an offer hopefully in Guangzhou as soon as possible. I will continue to update my website to share you with my work.
