Farewell Dinner with Undergraduate Friends — Marquette University Class of 2021

Today, I had a dinner with my friends. This is probably the last meal we will ever have together before graduating college. After today, we will head to the next chapter of our lives. Who knows, after many years, where we will be, and if we will still be in touch and talk like we do tonight.

This is a farewell dinner. While none of us was prepared, it is what it is, and it is here right on our table. It marks the end of a chapter in our lives. As we ate, we reflected on the past four years studying, living, and playing together. We tried to recover some of the lost pieces of memory in the furthestmost corner of our mind. I felt excited, welcomed, but also sad at the same time. Graduation is a big deal. This is one of those moments that we experience only once in life.

Moving forward, I will try my best to stay in touch with these college friends. While we may live and work in different cities after tonight, we will all share this fond memory — the memory that will bound us together.

Cheer for college, cheer for graduation, and may all of us succeed in the future.

So long!
