Another VPN Extension for PRC-Based Users

3rd June 2021

As previously mentioned in two posts, I will continue to resist the Chinese Communist Party's unjust internet censorship through bypassing the notorious Great Firewall. I will also share my solutions with all of you because I believe it is everyone's basic right to have access to critical information.

Virtual Private Networks (VPN) not only help access blocked websites and applications in countries like the People's Republic of China (PRC), but they also help make it faster to access unblocked foreign platforms as they are all adversely impacted by the Great Firewall. Today, I have taken another step to secure information access for everyone who visits my weblog.

Hoxx VPN Proxy is the newest VPN browser extension I found. It works perfectly free of charge. You need to set up an account to use this service though. If you have Firefox downloaded, I highly recommend you checking out this VPN solution. When the government unjustly takes away our rights, we must resist and fight back with necessary work. Installing a VPN on your device is one of those necessary steps we must take to defend our rights and interests.

Until I studied abroad in the United States, I had no idea how big the internet is supposed to be and how restricted the Chinese internet – I call it the world's largest local area network (LAN) – is. Please feel free to share the VPN solutions I post on my website. If you continue to visit my website, you will find more useful tools and tips like this.
